Lynn Kilpatrick
English 1010
Professor Kilpatrick
December 9, 2010

Annotated Bibliography

This is my annotation. Here is where I summarize what the text said. Then I evaluate how useful it is. Next, I analyze it briefly. Then I say how I will use it. And now I am done with my annotation.

This is my annotation. Here is where I summarize what the text said. Then I evaluate how useful it is. Next, I analyze it briefly. Then I say how I will use it. And now I am done with my annotation.

This is my annotation. Here is where I summarize what the text said. Then I evaluate how useful it is. Next, I analyze it briefly. Then I say how I will use it. And now I am done with my annotation.

This is my annotation. Here is where I summarize what the text said. Then I evaluate how useful it is. Next, I analyze it briefly. Then I say how I will use it. And now I am done with my annotation.

This is my annotation. Here is where I summarize what the text said. Then I evaluate how useful it is. Next, I analyze it briefly. Then I say how I will use it. And now I am done with my annotation.
Issue Summary

This is the summary that I have written, telling you what I know about what’s going on with my issue. Here is information about position A and then also about position B, and someone else who holds an entirely different position on my issue. I’m telling you what I know about what’s happening now. Here’s what I know.

This is the summary that I have written, telling you what I know about what’s going on with my issue. Here is information about position A and then also about position B, and someone else who holds an entirely different position on my issue. I’m telling you what I know about what’s happening now. Here’s what I know.

This is the summary that I have written, telling you what I know about what’s going on with my issue. Here is information about position A and then also about position B, and someone else who holds an entirely different position on my issue. I’m telling you what I know about what’s happening now. Here’s what I know.

This is the summary that I have written, telling you what I know about what’s going on with my issue. Here is information about position A and then also about position B, and someone else who holds an entirely different position on my issue. I’m telling you what I know about what’s happening now. Here’s what I know.
I have analyzed the sources I used to explain to you what is useful about them, in what ways they differ and also how they sometimes agree. I explain what source A believes and how it differs from what source B thinks. Furthermore, source C sometimes agrees with A and sometimes agrees with B, but fundamentally disagrees with source D. And now I will explain all about how ethos, logos, pathos and kairos are used in each of their arguments.

Blog Post

And now I am telling you, in a more casual tone and in a conversational manner what I know about my topic and how each source came to the conclusions they did. I’m explaining why each person thinks as they do and what I’ve learned from reading each of their arguments. I am considering their positions and deciding what I think about what each of them think. I’m considering all sides of the argument. I’ve been thinking about it as I did my research. And so I will discuss it at length.

And now I am telling you, in a more casual tone and in a conversational manner what I know about my topic and how each source came to the conclusions they did. I’m explaining why each person thinks as they do and what I’ve learned from reading each of their arguments. I am considering their positions and deciding what I think about what each of them think. I’m considering all sides of the argument. I’ve been thinking about it as I did my research. And so I will discuss it at length.

And now I am telling you, in a more casual tone and in a conversational manner what I know about my topic and how each source came to the conclusions they did. I’m explaining why each person thinks as they do and what I’ve learned from reading each of their arguments. I am considering their positions and deciding what I think about what each of them think. I’m considering all sides of the argument. I’ve been thinking about it as I did my research. And so I will discuss it at length.

And now I am telling you, in a more casual tone and in a conversational manner what I know about my topic and how each source came to the conclusions they did. I’m explaining why each person thinks as they do and what I’ve learned from reading each of their arguments. I am considering their positions and deciding what I think about what each of them think. I’m considering all sides of the argument. I’ve been thinking about it as I did my research. And so I will discuss it at length.
considering all sides of the argument. I’ve been thinking about it as I did my research. And so I will discuss it at length.